My dear Professor,

I hope my letter of May 2nd did not give you the impression, that we were asking you a general lecture instead of the seminar. What we should like is a general lecture in addition to the seminar in six sessions ;if you think you cannot do both, we prefer to have the seminar rather than the general lecture. If you can do both, a subject such as you suggest for the lecture would be all right.

The public attending the lecture will be composed of some thirty to forty biologists at large, from medical people to agricultural research workers and field workers. They are all expected to have a knowledge of elementary biometrical methods, and the aim of the course is to equip them with the knowledge of more advanced practical methods, as well as to give them some insight of the theoretical background . Depending both on the time at which you choose to give your lecture, namely at the beginning or end of the course ,and on the success of the teaching, you may have before you an audience who knows how to use a t-test, or an audience who is familiar with the analysis of variance and related problems.

Yours sincerely
