

February 22, 1937

Dear Miss Barnard,

I have just read your letter of January 18th, and was very glad to hear from you how you have been getting on. I believe at one time Student formed the intention of writing more fully in justification, either of systematic arrangements, or of the split drill system in particular, but I do not know whether he will carry out this intention if he looks into the matter more closely. I think he has a good enough head to see the difficulties he will be making for himself, though I believe he very much wants to justify Bevan's prejudices.

Yours sincerely,

in general