Dear Miss Allan:

Many thanks for your letter of 14 August. I should be very glad to see your friend Miss Barnard when she comes to London. I will have a talk to her with a view to deciding whether she would do better to work at Rothamsted or here.

I liked Mr. Cornish's work immensely and was very glad he had taken the matter up so thoroughly. I think he should publish at once even if there are a number of further calculations he has in view since these could always be published later and two short papers are easier to write and to read than one long one.

Thanks for enquiring about the pouched mice. They do seem to be singularly elusive creatures. If however, you hear later of any chance of getting at them I hope you will let me know as I could probably get the Zoo. to help me meet any reasonable expenses.

Yours sincerely,
